

BUILDING FOR TOMORROW: CREATING A PATIENT-CENTERED BUILT ENVIRONMENT IN BEHAVIORAL HEALTHCARE FACILITIES

A COMPACT DISC (CD) TRAINING – TWO CDs

Learn what behavioral healthcare providers need to know when building, adding, or renovating facility space.

Whether you are budgeting $3,000, $300,000, or $30 million for renovation, expansion, or new construction now or in the next few years, it's time to think about how you will get the greatest value from each dollar spent. Your experienced peers who have recently completed renovation or new construction have learned a tremendous amount about safety, clinical appropriateness, and efficiency in design of inpatient behavioral healthcare environments. They share what they've learned in this training.

This four-hour compact disc training brings you two case examples and two panels of those whose suggestions come from the real world. Whether you provide care in a general hospital unit, the behavioral health department of a medical center, a residential treatment facility, or a freestanding psychiatric hospital, you'll learn from those who organized the project, decided whether to renovate or expand or build new, anticipated future needs, managed effects on patients and staff, and – down to the last details – handled the renovation/construction. The training will be invaluable to your entire team, including your clinical leaders, building managers, architects, design consultants, and CEOs. And we will include a link to Web-based background materials to expand the training.
